Course Description
Addresses sexual and gender identity diversity in social, historical, and political context. Highlights current social justice issues and cultural ideologies related to sexual and gender identity diversity. Discusses social and scientific activism for sexual liberation; gay and lesbian identities and communities; sexuality beyond binaries and categories (e.g., bisexuality, pansexuality); asexuality; kink/fetish; transgender identities and sexualities; sexual fluidity and heteroflexibility; and queer sexual ethics and politics.

- 5-Credit Upper-Division Course in Social Psychology
- Required Prerequisite: PSYC 100 (or permission from the instructor)
- General Education Code: TA (Textual Analysis)

Learning Objectives
- Understand the ways that sexual identities are diverse, multi-faceted, fluid, and shaped by intersections with other parts of our experiences.
- Identify the ways that social forces (like media and laws) and historical context can both liberate and regulate sexual identity.
- Develop higher order reading skills, learning to read closely and attentively, to pay attention to detail, and to grasp the larger arguments and fuller implications of the texts.
- Practice ability to think independently, to understand and analyze the ideas of others, and to make a persuasive argument.
- Demonstrate critical thinking and interpretive skills, learning to think rigorously and analytically as well as imaginatively and creatively about written texts.
- Integrate course concepts and connect them to the personal experiences of students and people you know.
- Recognize that both research psychology and clinical psychology fields have real implications for the well-being of individuals and society.

<td>Please complete the assigned readings before each class. Daily readings are a foundation for the lecture material and discussions in our class meetings. Please see the Course Schedule and Reading Details for more information about the readings. Our readings focus on academic journal articles, and all readings are posted to Canvas.</td>
<td>Reading quizzes are due at noon on class days, so I have a chance to review the results and you have a chance to take a break before our 1 pm class. These quizzes are designed to check that you read the articles attentively and give you credit for doing this work. My intent with quiz questions is not to be tricky. Reading quizzes are open book and should be completed independently. By taking the reading quiz, you are also affirming that you have completed the readings. You can take 3 attempts at each quiz.</td>

Short Papers (35%)

One short paper is assigned each week. Each paper will be about 2 pages long. Topics are listed below, and more details about each paper assignment will be provided on an assignment sheet and reviewed in class. Papers should be your own original work, created for this class. Papers are due at 5pm on Fridays. *This deadline is automatically extended until 9am the following Monday morning for the first 4 papers.

Final Presentation (6%)

During our last class session, students will give a 3- to 5-minute presentation of their 5th paper, which will be a Creative Project. More details about this presentation will be provided on an assignment sheet and reviewed in class.

Course Policies

Late Work

Five weeks goes fast, and I encourage you to stay on top of your assignments. If you need more time on something, please let me know. If you’re falling more than a week behind on anything, plan to have a conversation with me. Because grades are due on a tight timeline, also plan to have a conversation with me if you’re falling behind on any work for the last week of class.

Incompletes

An “Incomplete” is a way to take extra time beyond the end of a term to complete the assigned work for a course. Taking an incomplete in the class will only be an option if you are earning a passing grade based on the first 4 weeks of material by the end of week 5 (Friday, July 22).

Accommodations

If there are things I can do to help you thrive in this class, I’d love to discuss this with you. If you have accommodations from the Disability Resource Center that would benefit you in this class, please confirm that I’ve received your DRC letter.
